Victory collegiate academy

Victory Collegiate Academy is a public charter school with a campus located in Phoenix, Arizona, serving 337 students in grades K-8. According to test scores, only 9% of students demonstrate proficiency in math, while 14% are proficient in reading. The school's diversity and culture have been highlighted by state reports, yet there is still room for improvement. For those considering this school as an employee or parent, it may be wise to explore other options due to its issues with administration, curriculum, and teacher qualifications. We're dedicated to helping underserved communities by giving all students the chance to flourish and reach their full potential. Our schools offer a well-rounded education that addresses every aspect of a student's life - "Healthy Body, Healthy Mind, Whole Child". This approach prepares our students for success in college, their careers, and beyond. For over 24 years, Nick Schuerman has been committed to creating educational environments that support vulnerable and at-risk populations. With extensive experience across public schools, charter schools, and private institutions, he brings a deep understanding of the unique needs of students who face significant challenges. His journey in education began as a teacher for seven years, followed by nine years as a principal and eight years as a Superintendent and CEO. Nick's drive to make a difference comes from his personal experience as a father to a child with autism. This led him to establish schools tailored to meet the needs of students on the autism spectrum, where they can thrive. Today, he's the founder and CEO of eight schools, including several special needs schools in Mexico. He surrounds himself with experts who provide specialized support for students with diverse needs. Cheryl Klock McNeill is joining us with 20 years of experience in management, leadership, and public relations. Her accomplishments have earned her several awards, publications, and recognition as a "Rising Star" in her field. Cheryl has built a successful career, having run her own campaign and serving in public office. She's no stranger to the corporate world either, having worked as one of three managing members at Mills Associates, LLC., overseeing a $110 million professional office building near the White House. Cheryl successfully guided the company through a major restructuring project, a feat not accomplished since the 1960s. Her manufacturing company has also gained recognition for its work in the art glass industry, published in the book "Art Glass Today". Cheryl's philanthropic efforts and volunteering have helped those in need, making her an ideal fit for VCA. Brad Lindsay joins the board with over 25 years of educational experience, including time spent in Title 1 schools. He taught self-contained classes in Spokane, WA, and launched basketball programs at his school. As a coach, he acquired funding from private individuals to support student athletes. Prior to retiring, Brad taught remedial reading, social studies, and coached intramural programs. His genuine care for students' success has earned him recognition. Scott brings over 18 years of experience working with public schools, including stints as managing partner and co-founder of a strategic consulting firm serving charter schools and non-profits.
